

Sad Ending of a Pleasure Party.

The Bonton Bulletin says: On Saturday evening last, a pleasure party from this place, consisting of twelve persons, five men and seven women, started for the residence of Mr. Samuel Campbell, about two miles distant, north of Montville, where they arrived all right. It is said that they had a remarkably happy time until between one and two o'clock on Sunday morning, when they started to return in the two-horse light spring wagon, attached to which were two very fine horses belonging to E. C. Jones, Esq., proprietor of the U. S. Hotel. For some reason or another the horses became frightened. Our informant states that they were frightened by the cars or the carelessness of the driver. Be that as it may, they started rapidly down the rocky road, along which were thrown all the party but two, who clung to the wagon until the collision with the coal train on the D. L. & W. R. R. took place.

When the horses first started, they were about one third of a mile from the railroad. Mr. Charles Harrington, a baker in the employ of Mr. Thos. MacNeish, noticing the danger to which the party were exposed, urged the driver to be careful in the management of the horses; but they were unmanageable. Harrington then attempted to get out of the wagon and was caught in the wheel and thrown violently to the ground. Wonderful to relate he was not injured, but considerable stunned. The rest of the party were thrown along the road. We will now give the account in Harrington's own words: "I arose as quickly as possible and started after the wagon. I had gone but a few yards when I discovered John Sanders lying senseless by the roadside. He revived in a few minutes. A few yards further on I found George Sanders and his sister Annie. The young lady was going on awfully. It was discovered that her wrist was broken. Her brother was endeavoring to comfort her. A little further down the road I found Lizzie Dupell, with her face badly bruised. Also, Jennie, who was considerably bruised about the person. They were badly frightened, crying and making a big fuss. Near by, was Annie Campbell, not much injured but awfully frightened. A short distance further down the road I found Theodore Jacobus lying on his back. Then I found Mary Lyon, with her leg terribly broken. The young man who was with the party, in a buggy, at once said he would take Miss Lyon to Bonton. She was lifted in the buggy and sent to the hotel, where she had been employed as a servant.

John Taylor and Mary Nash remained in the wagon until the horses ran into the passing coal train. They were then thrown to the ground, but escaped serious injury, although one horse was instantly killed, the other badly injured, the wagon demolished and twelve coal cars thrown from the track. How it happened that not a single member of the party was killed is certainly mysterious. In a narrow mountain road, hemmed in between rocks, in the darkness, with the cars running but a short distance away, what must have been the feeling of the party when the frightened horses started rapidly toward the railroad, the cars on which were heard and the lights seen? What a sad termination of a joyous time.

A New Trial For Stokes.

Stokes will have a new trial. The Court of Appeals on Tuesday morning reversed decision of the Supreme Court, and ordered a new trial. The charge is held to be erroneous, on the point that the law presumes murder from the fact of killing, and calls on the prisoner to mitigate or justify. Also there were errors in excluding proof of threats by the deceased to kill the prisoner; also an error in permitting Mrs. Morse to contradict Jennie Turner in a collateral matter called out on the cross-examination of Jennie, namely, as to whether she left Mrs. Morse's against her wish, and because detectives were said to be after her soon after the homicide. There were other points discussed, but these are the principal ones.

On the opening of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, in New York on Tuesday, the Grand Jury handed in a large batch of indictments, among which was one against Frank H. Walworth, for murder in the first degree. It is not settled when the prisoner will be arraigned. Young Walworth is easy in the Tombs, New York. He eats, drinks and sleeps with perfect equanimity.

The Milford (Del.) News has discovered a new enemy to the peaches, it being a sort of weevil, which under the glass, bears strong resemblance in color, shape, and motion to the black heart worm of corn; though, unlike that, it can suspend itself by a web. It is thought it is hatched outside of the bud, eats its way in, and then speedily departs. It attacks mainly the Hule's Early thus far.

Miss Leo Hudson, whose horse, Black Bess, was killed a few days ago while performing in St. Louis, and who was seriously injured at the same time, died on Monday from the grief and the attendant results of the accident. She was born in Leesburg, Va., March 22, 1843, and will be buried in Baltimore. She went upon the stage at the age of 12 years.

The extensive wooden mills at Hyde Park Mass., caught fire on Saturday morning and were entirely consumed. The loss is estimated at about $500,000. Over three hundred persons are thrown out of employment by the fire.

Modocs Massacred.

At daylight on Sunday, June 8th, John and James Fairchild, with twelve others, started from Fairchild's ranch with seven Modoc captives for Boyle's camp on the Peninsula. On arriving at the crossing of Lost River the party came across a company of Oregon volunteers commanded by Capt. Hizer. The Modoc captives, with their guard halted for a short time, and the volunteers departed. James Fairchild, with five of the Modocs, who were lying bound in the wagon, remained longer than the rest of his party at the crossing, and after starting to overtake his companions, was overtaken about a mile from the crossing by three men, who presented their rifles at Fairchild's head, and threatened him with death in case he interfered with them. The men then removed the five Modoc prisoners from the wagon and massacred them. The murderers are supposed to belong to the company of Oregon volunteers.

AN EBONY STAIN FOR WOOD.—Apple, pear, and walnut wood, especially of fine grain, give perfect imitations of ebony under the following treatment: Boil in a glazed vessel, with water, 4 ounces gall-nuts, 1 ounce logwood chips, 1 ounce vitriol, and 1 ounce crystallized verdigris; filter while warm, and brush the wood with the hot solution a number of times. The wood, thus stained black, is then to be coated two or three times (being allowed to dry completely after each coating) with a solution of 1 ounce of pure iron filings in a quart of good wine vinegar. This is to be prepared hot, and allowed to cool before use.
